

I'm coughing up blood. My hands are shaking. The infection is spreading. And in just over an hour one of the largest wiretap cyber-attacks in history will take place. For years I've eluded detection. The FBI, the corporations, and the public were my enemy. Anonymity was my only friend. But I made a mistake when covering my tracks earlier today. My work, my life—everything that I've accomplished—will be completely exposed. I am going to lose everything.
