

Loto, the young and campy leader of a remote indigenous community, is furious. First, a white Christian missionary shacks up with her in hopes of converting her tribe. Then an ambassador from a powerful territory called the Octagon Kingdom threatens to force her people to assimilate to the ways of “civilized” nations. This would include converting to an “approved” religion. But when Loto wins a bet against the Kingdom, she is granted one year to search the world for an approved religion best suited for her people. Is Loto genuinely interested in converting her tribe, or does she have other plans? 222 Pages Color Cover Black and White Interior
